[ID_6] Wanted level is not triggered when committing crimes during “Pizza This” odd job mission

Description

During the “Pizza This” odd job mission in Grand Theft Auto Online, the wanted level system does not activate when the player commits criminal actions,
While the mission is active, actions such as attacking NPCs or online players, destroying vehicles, or causing explosions fail to generate any wanted level,
Once the mission is completed or the mission fails, the wanted level system resumes normal functionality and crimes correctly trigger police response,
This indicates a temporary suppression or bypass of the wanted level system tied specifically to the mission state,
This issue may provide players with an unintended gameplay advantage, as it allows committing criminal actions without triggering law enforcement, potentially impacting fair play in online sessions

Pre-Conditions:
Player is in an active session (public or private),
Player has access to the “Pizza This” odd job mission,
No active wanted level before starting the mission

Steps to Reproduce:

1. Launch GTA Online
2. Join any online session
3. Start the “Pizza This” odd job mission
4. Begin pizza deliveries
5. Commit crimes
6. Observe wanted level behavior
7. Complete the mission OR fail the mission
8. After mission ends, commit crimes again
9. Observe wanted level behavior

Expected Result:
Wanted level should be triggered when the player commits crimes during the mission
Police response system should remain active regardless of mission state

Actual Result:
Wanted level is not triggered during the mission regardless of crimes committed,
Wanted level system resumes normal behavior only after mission completion or failure

Technical Reproducibility:
5/5
